Advances in Political Psychology

ISSN: 1479-0661

Series Editor

Professor Margaret Herrmann
Moynihan Institute of Global Affairs,
Syracuse University, USA

Given the continued growth and explosion of information and interest in political psychology, there is an increasing need for a place where the research findings, theoretical developments, and conceptual breakthroughs of this area of inquiry are synthesized and integrated in a form accessible to the scholar, student, and practitioner.

The Advances in Political Psychology annual series is intended to fill this need by recording the state of the field and highlighting innovative developments so that those who are interested can keep abreast of what is happening in political psychology.

Each volume will include six to eight chapters that capture the diversity of subject-matter that is studied by political psychologists.

Coverage includes:

- Comparative, cross-national, cross-cultural, cross-time (historical) studies.

Benefits and features

- Each volume captures the diversity of subject matter that is studied by political psychologists.

Association

This series is sponsored by the International Society of Political Psychology.
